

ART OF FLYING TAUGHT BY AMERICANS BY FRENCH

Aviation Corps Issues Circular at Paris Describing Objects in Training for Military Service.

UST PASS EIGHT CLASSES

Volunteers From United States Respond to Call of Republic at War in Same Spirit as Did Lafayette and Rochambeau.

PARIS, October 30.—The Franco-American flying corps is issuing a circular in which it describes the objects of the corps, which are to assist and to train Americans in military aviation for possible service in the American army should the occasion arise.

"What was the spirit that moved these young American citizens to cross the ocean and volunteer as French aviators?" says the pamphlet. "As one of them said, 'We wished to return the compliment which Lafayette and Rochambeau paid to us by wanting to belong to that fine and sportsmanlike institution, the French Aviation Corps, and we felt that Americans ought to help a republic that was in a conflict here the liberty of all nations was at stake.'"

CANDIDATES PUT THROUGH EIGHT CLASSES OF WORK

The first American volunteers were those of the first aviation schools in France, that at Pau. The candidates were put through eight classes. The first class was a short-winged machine called penguin. It has only twenty-five horsepower—not enough to lift it from the ground. The sole aim is to accustom the learner to regulate the motor and control the levers as in an automobile. No one can pass from one class to the next until he has shown aptitude. The observation of this class has avoided accidents, excepting very small number.

The second class uses a thirty-five-horsepower penguin, also not sufficiently strong to rise into the air. Then machine is given the pupil in which it can scarcely leave the earth.

WELVE AMERICANS ARE NOW AT FRONT

If he does rise, he skims along in straight lines. The fourth class is a biplane, capable of rising to 125 feet. The fifth contingent receives training in an aerodrome, so that pupils become thoroughly experienced in wheeling to right or left. The sixth division undertakes larger results at greater heights on fifty-horsepower machines. Cross-country flying and spiral ascents and descents to a height of 500 yards are the exercises of the seventh class. When all of these courses have been finished the pupil enters upon his last instruction, those that prepare him for a military pilot's examination. He must be able to fly for an hour at a time at a height of 600 feet, fly regularly across country, landing at six different places, returning to Pau within forty-eight hours. He must make long-distance flights to three different points and return. The circular says: "The Americans trained at Pau next spent some time at Le Bourget, near Paris. From this point they rise every hour numerous airplanes which fly over Paris both day and night. In the dark they are lighted like shooting stars. The Americans now number twelve at the front and eleven in training. The corps has clubrooms in Paris the Rue Ponthieu.

What Does This Store Mean to You?

Is it merely a place convenient to stop in when down town—to purchase a paper of pins, perhaps, or a pair of hose? Or does an occasional low price listed in our advertisement make an appeal to you now and then?

If it happens to be either of these, then it offers little advantage over the AVERAGE STORE in town. If these things are your sole reason for making a purchase here, this store's 58 years of merchandising is not the success we think it is.

If we have won patronage only because that patronage makes "PRICE TAG" COMPARISONS, then the foundation of this business is built on sand.

We are confident, however, that by far the vast majority of our patrons come to this store for FAVORITE REASONS.

SERVICE—something MORE than wrapping up your parcels and giving the correct change—all these are the attractions for which this store is desirous of being known.

SERVICE—that offers the FINEST, NEWEST and BEST in the world of merchandising.

SERVICE—that PROTECTS you against overenthusiastic exaggerated statements, either in printed or spoken words.

SERVICE—that offers you one prime inducement, and that is the MERCHANDISE ITSELF.

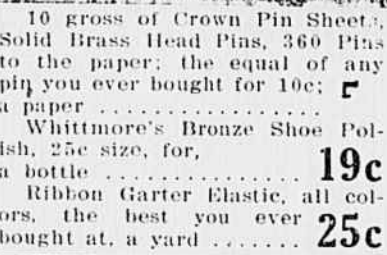

SERVICE—that offers NO REBATES as a balm for purchasing inferior or out-of-date goods.

These are the things for which this store bids for your CONTINUED PATRONAGE AND FRIENDSHIP.

These are reasons which makes this great store more enthusiastic as the years pass, and our fine, new stocks are being arranged and made ready for the fall campaign.

LET COHEN SERVICE BE OF ASSISTANCE TO YOU.
